A missionary of the apostolic school : being the life of Dr. A. Judson of Burmah [ Francis Wayland] ; rev. and ed. by Horatius Bonar. – London : Nisbet, 1871. VII, 374 p., app. – Editor’s prefatory note: This memoir of Dr. Judson has been prepared, under my superintendence, by my daughter [Mary Lundie Bonar]. It is a careful condensation of Wayland’s two volumes [Memoir of the life and labors of the Rev. Adoniram Judson], with occasional matter from other quarters. It is, in most parts, quite a new biography.

Note: The harrowing story of one of the greatest chapters of World War II – the building and defense of the Burma Road

W 21
The Burma Road tells the extraordinary story of the China-Burma-India theater of operations during World War II. As the Imperial Japanese Army swept across China and South Asia at the war's outset - closing all of China's seaports - more than 200,000 Chinese laborers embarked on a seemingly impossible task: to cut a seven-hundred-mile overland route - which would be called the Burma Road - from the southwest Chinese city of Kunming to Lashio, Burma. But with the fall of Burma in early 1942, the Burma Road was severed, and it became the task of the newly arrived American General Stilwell to re-open it, while, at the same time, keeping China supplied by airlift from India and simultaneously driving the Japanese out of Burma as the first step of the Allied offensive toward Japan.

In gripping prose, Donovan Webster follows the breathtaking adventures of the American "Hump" pilots who flew hair-raising missions over the Himalayas to make food-drops in China tells the true story of the mission that inspired the famous film The Bridge on the River Kwai and recounts the grueling jungle operations of Merrill's Marauders and the British Chindit Brigades. Interspersed with vivid portraits of the American General "Vinegar Joe" Stilwell, the exceedingly eccentric British General Orde Wingate, and the mercurial Chinese Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek, The Burma Road vividly re-creates the sprawling, sometimes hilarious, often harrowing, and still largely unknown stories of one of the greatest chapters of World War II.

Women and Child Rights Project (Southern Burma)
Burma's education in corrupt and oppression against ethnic education in Mon territory
The plights of women and children in Burma

Note: This article describes a commission for refugee women and children that studied living conditions among 4 disadvantaged populations of Burmese women, children, and students. The 4 populations included women students who fled in August 1988, after participating in a national strike against the repressive government of Myanmar; refugee women and children in Thai border camps; very young women from poor villages who ended up as prostitutes in Bangkok; and poor, young mothers and girls living in Myanmar. Investigators spent 10 days talking with women, medical staff, and officials and observing. Populations were located in the Immigration Detention Center in Bangkok, hidden jungle malaria-infested refugee camps in Thailand, and a clinic in Myanmar. A special section describes conditions in Vietnamese Detention Centers in Hong Kong. The authors recommend provision of assistance to ensure self-sufficiency among refugees. Relief should avoid channeling of aid through the proclaimed opposition government based in Manerplaw. The UN and the US should demand release of dissidents and try to open channels for direct humanitarian assistance. The long-term Karen in Thai refugee camps should be reunited with their people in Myanmar. There is a need for maternal-child health services, public health measures, and education. Women need family planning and skills other than prostitution for earning a living. AIDS hostels and HIV education are needed for Burmese sex workers. The international legal system should prosecute those luring young girls into prostitution. Poverty alleviation is a necessary tool for preventing deforestation of valuable teak forests.

Woodfuel flows in the dry zone of Myanmar
→Saw Thun Khiang

Contents: Forew. - Preface - Conversion Factors - Abbreviations
Pt. I Main Report - 1. Introduction
Pt. III. Annexures 1: Workshop Programme - Annexures 2: Inaugural Session - Annexures 3: List of Participants
Note: Despite the all-out efforts currently being made by the Myanmar Government to conserve and improve its forest resources, forest degradation and depletion are continuing at an alarming rate, mainly due to shifting cultivation, agricultural encroachment and illicit cutting. The heavy reliance on woodfuel has eroded its supply source in numerous areas and it is clear that unless urgent remedial measures are undertaken the more accessible forests will soon be exhausted and remote areas will have to be exploited instead, involving rising market prices.

The National Training Workshop on the Integration of Wood Fuel Production and Marketing in Forest, Agriculture and Tree Production Systems in Myanmar, jointly organised by the Forest And Energy Departments of Myanmar in March 1999, was a milestone in the country’s efforts to achieve sustainable bioenergy development. The workshop enhanced the awareness of wood energy amongst foresters and agroforestry practitioners, energy experts and many others directly related to training and research in relevant sectors and led to the recommendation of pragmatic strategies to promote sustainable bioenergy development for future implementation, such as the integration of multipurpose fast-growing trees into the farming system and the incorporation of wood energy into the policies of directly relevant sectors (i.e. energy, forestry, agriculture and rural development).
