A perspective on labour rights in Bangladesh

H. I. SADZU AIL

WOMEN IN THE WORKFORCE

E very year May 1st is observed as the International Workers' Day, a day that is recognized worldwide, including Bangladesh, in memory of the struggle for workers' rights. Among others, it is the day when the workers of the Workers' Day March of 1910 in Chicago established the rights of the workers by forcing the employers to improve the working conditions of the workers. In Bangladesh, the day is a public holiday and the factories remain closed. The day is observed with due attention to organize various programmes, including rallies and demonstrations.

On this day, the country is highlighted for its achievements and sacrifices made by the workers. Women's participation is also highlighted. Women are provided with equal rights to work and opportunities, but unfortunately, women are still facing a lot of problems.

In Bangladesh, there is a gender gap in the workforce, with only 30% of the labour force being female. Women are often subjected to discrimination and harassment in the workplace. Women workers are also at a higher risk of violence and exploitation.

In the context of Bangladesh, the International Women's Day is observed on March 8th. Women's Day is celebrated to raise awareness about the issues faced by women and to advocate for gender equality.

On this day, the government and various organizations organize various events, including rallies and demonstrations, to raise awareness about women's issues. Women's rights organizations also organize various events to highlight the issues faced by women and advocate for their rights.

Women's Day is celebrated in Bangladesh with various events, including rallies and demonstrations, to raise awareness about women's rights. Women's rights organizations also organize various events to highlight the issues faced by women and advocate for their rights.

Women's issues are also highlighted in the context of the International Women's Day. On this day, women's rights organizations organize various events to raise awareness about women's rights.

Women in Bangladesh are facing various challenges, including discrimination and harassment in the workplace. Women's rights organizations are working to raise awareness about these issues and advocate for gender equality.

Women's Day is celebrated in Bangladesh with various events, including rallies and demonstrations, to raise awareness about women's rights. Women's rights organizations also organize various events to highlight the issues faced by women and advocate for their rights.